

Buchanan's Dictionary of Quotations for right-minded Americans has been edited by a writer in the USFR, the Union of Socialist Feminist Republics (1997 -), formerly the United Kingdom, a country run ever more in line with socialist, feminist, and politically correct principles. A country embedded in the European Union, which runs along the same lines. The book is an antidote to such misguided thinking, and should serve as a warning to Americans not to look for political inspiration to Europe, the continent which gifted the world both communism and fascism.

'The theory of the Communists may be summed up in the single sentence: Abolition of private property.'

The Communist Manifesto (1840)

Karl Marx (1818-1883)

'In Hollywood, all the marriages are happy. It's trying to live together afterwards that causes all the problems.'

Shelley Winters (1920-2006)

'On my arrival in the United States I was struck by the degree of ability among the governed and the lack of it among the governing.'

Democracy in America (1835)

Alexis de Tocqueville (1805-1859)

'Love . . . the delightful interval between meeting a beautiful girl and discovering that she looks like a haddock.'

John Barrymore (1882-1942)

'Experience hath shewn, that even under the best forms of government, those entrusted with power have, in time, and by slow operations, perverted it into tyranny.'

Thomas Jefferson (1762-1826)

'Jane Austen's books are absent from the (ship's) library. Just that one omission alone would make a fairly good library out of a library that hadn't a book in it.'

Following the Equator (1897)

Mark Twain (1835-1910)

'The inherent vice of capitalism is the unequal sharing of blessings. The inherent virtue of socialism is the equal sharing of misery.'

Sir Winston Churchill (1874-1965)

'Unable obtain bidet. Suggest handstand in shower.'

Cabled response to his wife's cabled complaint from Paris just after the Second World War, that her accommodation did not have a bidet, and could he arrange to have one sent to her?

Billy Wilder (1906-2002)

'All that is necessary for the triumph of evil women is that good men do nothing.'

on The Rt Hon Harriet Harman MP, a British politically correct feminist socialist politician with hauntingly beautiful eyes, and her like

Good Morning Britain, this is your wake-up call (2010)

Mike Buchanan (1957 -)

'Being politically correct means always having to say you're sorry.'

Charles Osgood (1933 -)
